THE SITEMAP

THE NAVIGATION

THE REASONING

　　　　The purpose of our online portfolio is to be able to send it to possible employers and allow them to see past the resume, which is why I have decided to include much more than a resume on my sitemap. I think it's important to let them know what else you can do as well as what you're like. I want to include many samples of my work, which is why I put that as one of the main pages. I would also like to highlight the fact that I have photography experience because it's a passion of mine. I think that the pages that I have included in my site map will allow the people viewing my site to see the aspects that will make me a asset to their workforce.

Moving onto how the people will navigate my site, I think that limiting confusion will be key. I want to either have a top navigation bar (or a sidebar) always visible on my website with the main pages on it. I think that this is important so that the people viewing my site will be able to move freely and without restrictions. I would also like to put my contact information (mainly instagram, twitter, and email) at either the top or bottom of the page at all times. This makes it easier for them to contact me if they feel inclined. As for my home page, I think having a short "about" description will work as an opener for my portfolio because it will give them a small taste of what I see myself as and what I hope to accomplish on a professional and personal basis.
